MARKETING

EDUCATION ANCHORED IN REAL WORLD NEEDS

MII commissioned an independent research study, undertaken by Core Research* to identify the existing and future skills requirements in Ireland.

Business leaders (CEO's, CMO's and CFO's) were asked about the most critical skills and competencies needed across the business and marketing landscape in Ireland and globally.

While marketing is highly valued, our research results clearly show gaps across areas such as digital, technical and operational know-how, and in terms of softer skills such as change management, emotional intelligence and decision-making.

MII is using these findings to continuously inform our programme development, ensuring our education and lifelong learning aligns with our members' needs, and those of the wider marketing and business sectors.

 Market research conducted April '21. A telephone survey and qualitative in-depth interviews were carried out, alongside MII membership survey. Over 235 participants took part in the research.*

MII is using insights to inform how we develop our programmes, ensuring our education and lifelong learning aligns with our members' needs.

Marketer Pathways: a bespoke competency framework

We will evolve the framework continually to reflect the changing business and consumer environment in Ireland and worldwide.

Be better. Do better.

True professional development education is tailored to those it serves. MII designed and developed the Marketer Pathways Competency Framework specifically for the marketing profession. It's divided into three key streams:

- Marketing
- Business
- People

The framework will help marketers like you and employers to understand the capabilities needed for the job you have now and those required for future roles.

The framework enables marketing professionals and their teams to:

- identify their current career stage
- identify where they would like to be
- understand how to get there with a personalised development plan

MIl programmes align with the competencies within the framework, making clear to marketers which ones are relevant to their personal development plans so that they can address any critical skills gaps.
